Kimberly has devoted her career to helping organizations and their leaders go from better to best. With over 25 years of experience as a coach, senior human resources leader, and management consultant, Kimberly applies tools from across the fields of adult development, conscious leadership, and positive psychology to help leaders and their teams achieve great results. Her clients come from the Legal, Tech, Financial and other Professional Services, and Nonprofit sectors.

Kimberly often works with clients at the intersection of ambition and anxiety, helping them break big challenges into manageable pieces using humor and empathy. Her passion for the people side of work is matched by her deep familiarity with business and strategy. She previously served as vice president of Human Resources for Managers Investment Group, and as a consultant in the Global Human Resources Services practice at PricewaterhouseCoopers.

She currently sits on the board of the Philadelphia Outward Bound School where she co-leads the DEI pathway.

Kimberly holds an MBA from the University of Chicago Booth School of Business and a BA from the University of Pennsylvania.

Kimberly and her husband live in Philadelphia and are designing a house in Maine where they and their spoiled whippet can wander in the woods.
