Leadership is about bringing one's whole self to the table when creating action with other people. When we fully show up, others are naturally invited to do the same.

Michael has been an executive coach and trainer for almost a decade. He has helped hundreds of leaders get out of their own way by enabling them to develop greater self-awareness and to consciously practice more effective behaviors so that they can create a bigger impact and experience greater satisfaction in their work and life.

Along with his deep experience in leadership development, one of Michael's core areas of focus is productivity. He developed this expertise during his previous role as a Senior Coach for David Allen, widely considered to be the productivity guru of this era.

Michael lives in San Rafael, CA with his two children.
